This is my very first book collection on the Internet, so it is quite a bit early (but I hope it is a very good book). There are only 20 titles listed so far (though some are probably out of print or are being added to this collection, or are being released soon! I expect many more by the end of this year). However, my goal is to complete most of these books in the next six months or so, and at the end, I hope everyone will be pleased with something. There are around Download Download Author Notes Abstract This study examines the effects of lauric acid on cell differentiation. The objective was to determine whether lauric acid reduces the expression of NF-κBs by measuring gene expression for their expression levels and with how much and to what degree. As lauric acid decreased cell differentiation in cells treated with L-dopa (L-Dopa)-treated or vehicle and L-dopa alone, the NF-κB and MAPK pathway were induced. In particular, Lauric acid increased pCREB levels in cultured cortical progenitor cells (PPC). Lauric acid treatment suppressed apoptosis and protected differentiated cells against oxidative damage. Inhibition of NF-κB and MAPK mediated suppression of Caspase-3 induced cell differentiation by activating PICP. Finally, Lauric acid treatment attenuated cell proliferation in cultured differentiated cells as well as cell survival of treated PPC in a dose-dependant manner.
